Ruined

As soon as I returned home, I settled Barkis's will in favour of Peggotty. There at the office I met Mr. Murdstone who had come to apply for a marriage licence. He was going to marry a rich young widow.

Eight days later was Dora's birthday and I was invited to a little picnic on the occasion. I brought Dora flowers, which she kept with her during the entire picnic. I was totally happy to be with Dora, it was like being in heaven.

Four days later, Dora and I were engaged. But we decided to keep it a secret from Mr. Spenlow for a while. However, I told Peggotty who was still in London on the will business and I wrote to Agnes about it, and tried to make her understand what a darling Dora was.

Returning to my room with Peggotty one day, we were surprised to find my door open and heard voices inside. To my amazement I found my aunt and Mr. Dick sitting there. My aunt was sitting on a large quantity of luggage, with two birds in front
