The Birthday Gift

Tahir and Qamar were best friends. One day, Tahir told Qamar excitedly, "Our birthdays fall on the same date. Let us celebrate together this time and give each other gifts." Qamar thought it was a great idea and agreed. Both of them told their parents about their plan. Their parents advised, "If you save your pocket money with patience, both of you will have enough money for the gifts."

They gave two little money boxes to the boys. Tahir and Qamar were very happy. They put the boxes on their study tables. They used to drop one coin every day into their boxes.

One day before their birthdays, they took the boxes to their parents. The boxes were now heavy with coins. The parents praised them for their patience. The boys ran to the market to buy gifts for each other.

On the birthday evening, they exchanged gifts. Tahir told Qamar, "Here is the toy car you always wanted." Qamar was overjoyed. He replied, "And here is the card game you had wished for this birthday." They hugged each other joyfully.

Moral: Patience gives great rewards
