Flowers in the Garden

Edward was a little boy who lived with his parents. He was rude and never shared his things with others.

One day, Edward said to his mother, "It would be so wonderful if we have flowers in our garden. Mom, please get me some seeds." His mother said, "Sure, let us do one thing. Whenever you share your things with anyone, I will give you a seed to plant." Edward agreed. The next day, Edward shared his toys with the neighbour's children. He also shared his favourite story books.

Now every day, Edward would share his things with others. He also started helping others. As promised, his mother gave him a seed for every kind act.

Days passed and colourful flowers blossomed in Edward's garden. He was very happy. His mother told him, "Sharing makes us feel happy. Always be kind and caring towards others."

Moral: Sharing gives joy.
