Sympathy

Fizzah Abid Warris

The King and His Father

Once upon a time, there lived a king. One day, he saw an old dog in front of his huge palace. The frail dog was shivering. The king shouted, "What is this old ugly dog doing in front of my palace?" In a corner, he saw an old cow and an old bull resting under a tree.

The irritated king ordered his servant,
"Kill all the old animals in my kingdom.
I don't want to see any of them."

When the king returned to his palace, he saw his old father going somewhere. He asked him, "Father, are you going out for a walk? I will come along." The old man replied, "No son, I am going to a far off place. I am getting old. Tomorrow, you might ask your servants to kill me too."

The king realised his mistake. He asked his servants to make a special shelter for the old animals of the kingdom.

Moral: Sympathise with the old and needy and help them.
